Evoca Group Announces Changes at C-Level

Evoca Group announced that Jochen Fabritius is expected to step down as CEO of Evoca Group in the second half of 2025 to pursue other opportunities. At such time, he will become Chairman of Evoca Group and in this role will continue his strategic oversight and dedicate time to key customers as well as innovation.

Upon Mr. Fabritius' resignation, Norman Rafael, the current COO of Evoca Group and a key driver of the company's transformation to leading the value-for-money-segment for out-of-home coffee and vending solutions, will succeed Mr. Fabritius as CEO of Evoca Group.

Mr. Fabritius said, "I am proud of what we have achieved together as a team since I joined Evoca. Project Evo has been a huge success and is delivering well above plan. I see a bright future in front of us."

Mr. Rafael stated, "I am looking forward to continuing Evoca Group's strong growth path and further building out our global position. Together with our passionate teams, dedicated partners, and valued customers, and in close collaboration with Jochen Fabritius in his role as Chairman, we will drive our shared vision forward with our customers at the centre of everything we do."
